

Advocating for Sustainable Development

- We are proud to share that Alexandra Agorastou, Lawyer, Chief of Corporate Culture at Saranti & Partners, and a volunteer legal advisor at Humanity Greece, participated as a speaker at the conference “Economic Transition and Sustainable Development: Challenges and Opportunities for the Future,” organized by the Student Association of the Department of Economics and Sustainable Development at Harokopio University of Athens.
- As a volunteer and member of the legal team at Humanity Greece, Alexandra contributed valuable insights on sustainability, legal compliance, and ethical governance. Humanity Greece is a volunteer-driven organization dedicated to providing humanitarian aid and supporting vulnerable communities through impactful initiatives. The organization upholds the highest standards of transparency and legal compliance, ensuring its operations remain ethical, accountable, and aligned with both national and international regulations.

Alexandra's participation underscores our firm's commitment to promoting sustainable development and supporting initiatives that enhance awareness and knowledge on this crucial issue.

- During the panel discussion, Alexandra addressed the complex challenges of economic transition and emphasized the importance of adopting sustainable practices within a robust legal and ethical framework. She highlights how transparency, accountability, and regulatory compliance are essential for NGOs to build public trust, secure vital funding, and maximize their social impact.
- Her participation highlights the critical role of legal professionals in shaping sustainable development policies and strengthening ethical governance. It also reflects our firm's commitment to supporting organizations that prioritize legal integrity, accountability, and long-term sustainability.
